TikTok maintained strong visibility in September with the same €80 ad investment as August. Post views increased to 284,700 (+5.4%), confirming that the platform continued to deliver broad reach. Lower-funnel and sharing metrics softened compared with August, with profile views decreasing to 539 (-24.5%), likes falling to 567 (-28.5%) and shares reaching 143 (-65.6%). One possible explanation is that September's content mix generated visibility but was less aligned with the formats that typically encourage profile visits, sharing and active interaction. In October, the content approach will be adjusted by testing more dynamic, people-focused and interaction-led formats, with stronger hooks and clearer calls to action, in order to improve engagement and content circulation.
